Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 29 Jul 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Unseasonably strong winds affecting south-west England tonight.

Today:
Rain across northern areas turning more showery through the day, but still some heavy and possibly thundery showers for south-east Scotland and northern England. Elsewhere, sunny spells and a few showers, then turning wet and windy in the south-west later.

Tonight:
Rain, some heavy moving north across Wales and much of England, followed by heavy, thundery showers in the south. Very windy in the south-west with coastal severe gales.

Friday:
Very windy in the far south during the morning, as more persistent rain clears, to leave sunny spells and scattered heavy showers and isolated thunderstorms.

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Sunshine and showers in the south with the chance of a thunderstorm. Drier in the north. Temperatures around or just below average with light or moderate winds.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.